

Children's Non-Fiction

“All About Trees,” Jane Dickinson, 1983

Learn about the many uses of trees by humans and animals, as well as their physiology and lifecycle.

“Armies of Ants,” Walter Retan, 1994

A Level 4 reader (grades 2 & 3) describing the life and importance of ants in our natural ecosystems.

“Busy Chipmunk,” Kristen Hall, 2001

A very cute beginning rhyming reader about a chipmunk gathering nuts and preparing for winter. Perfect for very early readers.

“From Flowers to Fruit,” Fred & Jeanne Biddulph, 1995

Learn the intricate and unique process of pollination and fruit production in plants and flowers.

“Getting to Know Nature’s Children: Coyote & Monarch Butterfly,” Caroline Greenland & Bill Ivy, 1985

An entry in the Getting to Know...Nature's Children Series, this volume is divided into two sections and looks at the life of coyotes and butterflies, from babyhood to adulthood. It is illustrated with many color photographs of these creatures in the wild.

“Getting to Know Nature’s Children: Deer & Rabbits,” Laima Dingwall & Merebeth Switzer, 1984

An entry in the Getting to Know...Nature's Children Series, this volume is divided into two sections and looks at the life of deer and rabbits, from babyhood to adulthood. It is illustrated with many color photographs of these creatures in the wild.

“Getting to Know Nature’s Children: Elk & Mice,” Pamela Martin, Susan Horner & Celia B. Lottridge, 1985

An entry in the Getting to Know...Nature's Children Series, this volume is divided into two sections and looks at the life of elk and mice, from babyhood to adulthood. It is illustrated with many color photographs of these creatures in the wild.

“Getting to Know Nature’s Children: Loons & Black Bears,” Judy Ross & Caroline Greenland, 1985

An entry in the Getting to Know...Nature's Children Series, this volume is divided into two sections and looks at the life of loons and black bears, from babyhood to adulthood. It is illustrated with many color photographs of these creatures in the wild.

“Getting to Know Nature’s Children: Moose & Downy Woodpecker,” Judy Ross & Katherine Grier, 1985

An entry in the Getting to Know...Nature's Children Series, this volume is divided into two sections and looks at the life of moose and downy woodpeckers, from babyhood to adulthood. It is illustrated with many color photographs of these creatures in the wild.

“Getting to Know Nature’s Children: Pelicans & Snakes,” Candace Savage, Merebeth Switzer & Katherine Grier, 1985

An entry in the Getting to Know...Nature's Children Series, this volume is divided into two sections and looks at the life of pelicans and snakes, from babyhood to adulthood. It is illustrated with many color photographs of these creatures in the wild.

“Getting to Know Nature’s Children: Walrus & Hawks,” Laima Dingwall & Merebeth Switzer, 1985

An entry in the Getting to Know...Nature's Children Series, this volume is divided into two sections and looks at the life of walruses and hawks, from babyhood to adulthood. It is illustrated with many color photographs of these creatures in the wild.

“The Secret Life of Trees, Chiara Chevallier, 1999

Why do trees lose their leaves in winter? How do insects hide on bare branches? Let the trees themselves reveal their many secrets just to you. Perfect for 1st-2nd graders.

“Which Insects Live Here?” Greg Pyers, 2000

Discover the natural world with your young child! With bright watercolor illustrations, learn about the insects that live in trees, ponds, gardens, and in our homes.

“World Book Encyclopedia Presents: Plants, Monica Byles, 1998

Plants of all kinds, shapes, and sizes are described and explained in this book for ages 7-12. Learn how plants use the sun as a food source, their importance to animals and pollinators, how we use and cultivate plants for food and industry and much more.