

Poetry – All Ages

“A Book for All Seasons,” Rosalyn Rikel Ramage, 1977

A beautiful collection of 44 nature poems.

“Animal Poems for Children,” Selected by DeWitt Conyers, 1982

Perfect for reading aloud, this Golden Storytime Book provides an irresistible introduction to the subjects that appeal the most to very young children – nursery rhymes, folk and fairy tales, words, numbers, animals, cars and trucks, stories about children’s everyday experiences, and many others.

“Poetry for Young People: Robert Frost,” Edited by Gary D. Schmidt, 2008

Your own world will quickly melt away as Robert Frost draws you into winter wonderlands, forests and fields. More than twenty-five of the Pulitzer Prize winner’s best-loved poems are included, along with stunning illustrations, in this introduction work of one of America’s greatest poets.

“Tell Me a Season,” Mary McKenna Siddals, 1997

Color images of the four seasons are presented in simple descriptive language and vibrant art. A perfect book for the very young!
